

(a)

(b)

(c)

Figure 4.1 Some instances of the Interval Scheduling Problem on which natural greedy algorithms fail to find the optimal solution. In (a), it does not work to select the interval that starts earliest; in (b), it does not work to select the shortest interval; and in (c), it does not work to select the interval with the fewest conflicts.