

Figure 7.16 The Survey Design Problem can be reduced to the problem of finding a feasible circulation: Flow passes from customers (with capacity bounds indicating how many questions they can be asked) to products (with capacity bounds indicating how many questions should be asked about each product).